Mr Dave,

The tables of contents, etc. came yesterday. Postmarked Thursday so there was no delay except getting into the mails. I think it is all fine. I have some questions about the extended table of contents and will be thinking of it more. However, I'll start using the other in copies immediately and with a few changes the biblio. For example, should I use my name or author? And I'll fill the gaps in.

I do appreciate your taking the time.

With the extended I wonder if all the names have to be identified in it or if they are not it'll make sense. Some of it is pretty staccato and I guess it must be or it would be even longer. (I can remember when much of the nonfiction had extended t of c's.)

I fear that in the end it may be too long but can tell only by sitting down with the typed version and comparing it with the extended t of c.

But then what is too long and what isn't? Have to think about it. But I like the idea very much.

Think there should be last names instead of initials, too.

More later. Thanks,

Harvey
